MART JULA, BOSTON FEATURES EDITOR

While the temperatures are cooling off, things are heating up in Boston's food scene. As the leaves continue to change and fall sets in, a number of bold new restaurants are opening their doors to spice up the palates of local foodies. From retro arcades to global fusion flavors, we've put together a nifty guide to all the up-and-coming hotspots you should check out this season. Bon appetit!

TRUMP TO VISIT N. CAROLINA, DEATH TOLL AT 33

Residents of the Carolinas struggled to return to normalcy on Tuesday after taking a beating from Hurricane Florence, but their efforts were hindered by standing water and additional flooding expected from already swollen rivers. Florence has killed at least 33 people since coming ashore as a hurricane on Friday, including 26 in North Carolina and six in South Carolina. One person was killed when Florence spawned at least 16 tornadoes on Monday in Virginia, the National Weather Service said. The White House said President Donald Trump would visit North Carolina on Wednesday. He has been criticized for his handling of Hurricane Maria, which devastated Puerto Rico last year, and more recently for disputing the official death toll of 3,000. Waterways were expected to keep rising on Tuesday in places like Fayetteville, N.C., a city of 200,000 in the southern part of the state, according to the National Weather Service, hampering efforts to restore power, clear roads and allow residents to return to their homes.

KAVANAUGH ACCUSER'S TESTIMONY IN DOUBT

A woman who has accused President Donald Trump's Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh of sexual assault decades ago has not yet agreed to testify at a U.S. Senate hearing set for next Monday, raising questions about whether the high-stakes public showdown will take place. Christine Blasey Ford, a university professor in California whose allegations have put Kavanaugh's once-safe nomination in jeopardy, has not responded to attempts by the Republican-led Senate Judiciary Committee to contact her about appearing at the hearing, committee Chairman Chuck Grassley said on Tuesday. "We have reached out to her in the last 36 hours, three or four times by email, and we've not heard from them. So it kind of raises the question ... do they want to come to [the] public hearing or not?" Grassley said in an interview with conservative radio host Hugh Hewitt. "I want to hear from Dr. Ford," Grassley said. "And she deserves to be heard because these are serious accusations. And I would surely hope she'd come Monday."

FAST-FOOD ACTIVISTS ORGANIZE STRIKE TO COMBAT SEXUAL HARASSMENT

McDonald's workers are joined by other activists as they march toward the company's headquarters to protest sexual harassment at the fast-food chain's restaurants on Tuesday in Chicago. Similar actions took place around the country and were touted as the first-ever nationwide "strike against sexual harassment in the fast-food industry." According to a recent study, 40 percent of female fast-food workers experience unwanted sexual behavior on the job.

NEEDLES FOUND IN STRAWBERRIES IN AUSTRALIA

Needles have been found inside strawberries in two more Australian states, police said on Monday, broadening a health scare that has caused supermarkets to recall brands and farmers to dump fruit amid the peak growing season. One man in the state of Western Australia and a girl in South Australia reported finding needles in their strawberries in the past two days, according to police. Seven brands of strawberries in Australia are now believed to be contaminated with needles and pins, according to police reports, prompting warnings from authorities to slice the fruit before eating. Queensland Police Commissioner Ian Stewart told reporters on Monday that it was unclear if the contamination was the result of a single person acting alone or several people acting independently and that tracing back through the complex supply chain was taking time. Consumers in Queensland were the first to report finding needles embedded inside strawberries. "A member of the public today presented at York Police Station to report his concerns that a needle had been in a punnet of strawberries," the Western Australian police said in a statement.

POLAND SUGGESTS 'FORT TRUMP' FOR MILITARY BASE

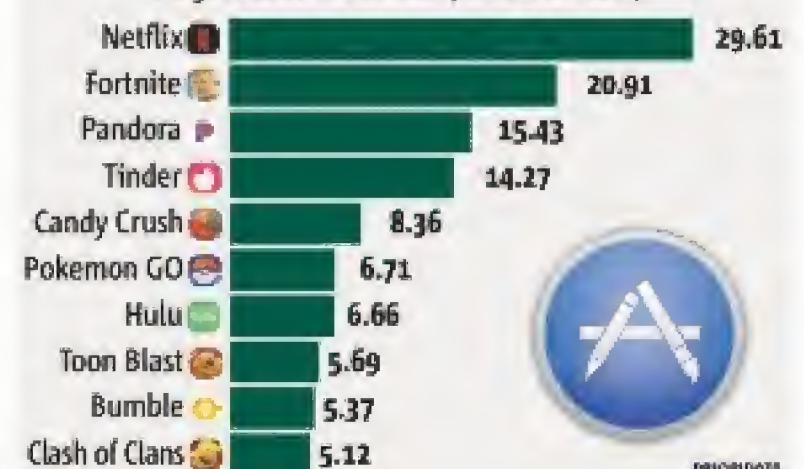

President Donald Trump said on Tuesday the United States is considering a request from Poland for a permanent U.S. military presence in the fellow NATO country, acknowledging that he shares Poland's concerns about possible Russian aggression. Polish President Andrzej Duda asked Trump for a permanent U.S. base during a White House meeting, offering to name it "Fort Trump," and explaining it would be a bulwark against what he considers a threat from Russia. Trump said he agreed with Duda that Moscow had "acted aggressively" in the region and said the request for a base was under consideration. He said he appreciated Duda's offer to put more than $2 billion into the project. "We're looking at it very seriously, I know Poland likes the idea very much, and it's something that we are considering, yes," Trump told reporters. Moscow expressed concern in May over reports about Poland's request, saying NATO's expansion toward Russia's borders undermined stability in Europe.

Firefighters work to extinguish a fire caused by over-pressurized gas lines last Thursday in Lawrence, Mass. Dozens of fires broke out in Lawrence, North Andover and Andover because of the gas lines. GETTY IMAGES

Prior to explosions, pipe pressure was 12 times higher than normal

Columbia Gas announced on Tuesday that it will donate $10 million to a disaster relief fund for the Merrimack Valley in the wake of the gas explosions.

kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Ahead of gas explosions in Lawrence, North Andover and Andover that led to one death and at least 25 injuries, the Columbia Gas pipelines were found to be over-pressurized, registering a pressure 12 times higher than normal.

Sens. Ed Markey and Elizabeth Warren cited that information, which came from a federal Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA) report, in a letter to Columbia Gas of Massachusetts and its parent company, NiSource.

"[The PHMSA] has reported that the pressure in the Columbia Gas system should have been around 0.5 pounds per square inch (PSI), but readings in the area reached at least 6 PSI — 12 times higher than the system was intended to hold," the letter reads.

The senators sent the letter on Monday, as well as a letter to the PHMSA, requesting more detailed information about the gas explosions on Sept. 13, which affected more than 8,600 gas customers in the area.

Thousands of customers were displaced due to the gas explosions. Kurt Schwartz, director of the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency, said that crews responded to 60 to 80 structure fires on that Thursday.

Leonel Rondon, 18, of Lawrence was killed as a result of the explosions. He was inside his car when the shock waves of the gas explosions toppled a chimney, which collapsed onto his vehicle.

The senators are specifically asking for documents including "unredacted versions of the company's Integrity Management Plan and any emergency response plan," responses to the report that the gas pipelines registered as over-pressurized and details on work that Columbia Gas may have been conducting on the pipeline system.

"It is imperative that the people of the commonwealth are provided an understanding of what caused this disaster and how you responded to it, in order to ensure that we never again face a similar tragedy," the senators wrote.

Sens. Markey and Warren requested the information by Sept. 19.

Columbia Gas will donate $10 million to the Greater Lawrence Disaster Relief Fund, a recovery foundation to help both the individuals and businesses affected by the gas explosions.

Columbia Gas president Steve Bryant announced the donation on Tuesday in Lawrence, where Gov. Charlie Baker met with Lawrence mayor Daniel Rivera and other local leaders to give an update on disaster relief for the thousands of victims.

"The citizens of Greater Lawrence are truly hurting, and our hearts go out to the entire community," Bryant said in a statement. "The people of these communities expect us to provide comprehensive and meaningful support, and we are committed to doing so. In addition to the direct assistance we are providing — and will continue to provide — to our customers, this contribution represents our commitment to the long-term recovery of the entire community."

5 Finalist designs for Boston's MLK memorial announced

Mayor Marty Walsh and MLK Boston are working together to build a memorial to Martin Luther King Jr. and Coretta Scott King.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

A year after announcing that he would work to erect a Martin Luther King Jr. memorial in Boston, and following a dozen community meetings on the vision, Mayor Marty Walsh has unveiled the five finalists.

The Martin Luther King Jr. memorial will honor the activist as well as his wife, Coretta Scott King, in the city where they met. The memorial is set to be a permanent piece of art on the Boston Common.

The five final design proposals, revealed Tuesday, vary in their visual homage to the Kings, from a black stone bridge to a brightly-colored mosaic and a bold bronze sculpture.

City officials are working with MLK Boston, a nonprofit founded by entrepreneur Paul English and co-chaired by Liz Walker, to build the Martin Luther King Jr. memorial. In a statement, Walker said that she finds "breathtaking components" in all five finalist designs that "inspire and provoke, and speak to both this country's troubled past and our potential future."

"Even more importantly, each proposal speaks to the many voices Paul and I have heard as we have moved around this city, from neighborhood to neighborhood, inviting people to take part in the project," she added. "Whatever the final choice is, it will represent a collective voice."

Officials say that they held more than a dozen community meetings with activists, youth leaders and residents to discuss the Martin Luther King Jr. memorial. Because of those meetings, the project has been expanded from one element to three: the outdoor memorial on the Boston Common, a Roxbury-headquartered program that over-

Stormy goes into detail about Donald Trump's 'unusual' penis

Her new book has a lot of details you'll probably wish you'd never read.

MEAGAN MORRIS
letters@metro.us

Stormy Daniels' new book is telling us all about the president — and she's leaving nothing (and we mean nothing) out.

Stormy Daniels' new book, "Full Disclosure," details her life story, right down to her 2006 encounter with then-"Apprentice" star Donald Trump.

In the book, Daniels, whose real name is Stephanie Clifford, recalls meeting President Trump at a 2006 celebrity golf tournament in Lake Tahoe, Calif.

"He had a red cap, a Trump crest as a placeholder for the MAGA slogan not one of us could see coming," she wrote.

Trump liked what he saw and had his bodyguard invite Daniels to dinner — a date that ended with sex in his penthouse. In Stormy Daniels' book, she calls sex with Trump "the least impressive" she's had, but "clearly, he didn't share that opinion."

Daniels describes Trump's penis as "smaller than average" but not "freakishly small."

"He knows he has an unusual penis," Daniels writes in the book. "It has a huge mushroom head. Like a toadstool ..."

Add that to the list of things we never wanted to know about Donald Trump.

"I lay there, annoyed that I was getting f—d by a guy with Yeti pubes and a d—k like the mushroom character in Mario Kart..." she writes.

The revelations — excerpted in The Guardian — also go into another experience Daniels had with Trump, in 2007. On that visit, she recalls overhearing a phone conversation he had with Hillary Clinton, who was then running against Barack Obama for the Democratic nomination.

"He had a whole conversation about the race, repeatedly mentioning 'our plan'..." she writes. "Even while he was on the phone with Hillary, his attention kept going back to the sharks."

Why did she keep seeing him, despite the lack-luster sex? She wanted to ensure that he would follow through on his promise to cast her on "The Apprentice."

"We'll figure out a way to get you the challenges beforehand," she recalls him saying. "And we can devise your technique."

"He was going to have me cheat, and it was 100 percent his idea."

Daniels also reveals that she never thought Trump would make it to the White House.

"It will never happen, I would say," Daniels writes of talking about his campaign with former co-stars. "He doesn't even want to be president."

This isn't the first time someone has commented on Trump's lack of desire for the Oval Office. Michael Wolff also detailed Trump's plan to lose the election in his book, "Fire and Fury."

"Once he lost, Trump would be both insanely famous and a martyr to Crooked Hillary. His daughter Ivanka and son-in-law Jared would be international celebrities. Steve Bannon would become the de facto head of the tea-party movement. Kellyanne Conway would be a cable-news star," Wolff wrote.

"Melania Trump, who had been assured by her husband that he wouldn't become president, could return to inconspicuously lunching. Losing would work out for everybody. Losing was winning."

Daniels now has the fame she sought back in the early 2000s — for better or for worse.

"The deck has always been stacked against me," she writes in "Full Disclosure," adding: "I own my story and the choices I made."

5 Tips to help fix your bad posture

It's never too late to stop the slouch.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Do you find yourself hunching your way through life? Well, it turns out the little things we do throughout the day can contribute to bad posture, which can affect our breathing patterns and digestion. We spoke with Charlotte Reardon, a New York-based trainer with Bicoastal Management modeling agency, who has recently worked with models for Adidas, DVF and Jason Wu, to see why good posture is so important and how we can correct it.

"Posture is so incredibly important in so many different ways," explains Reardon, who had made a career of being a fit model and ballerina before coaching people in those industries on fixing their bad posture. "Hunching over is such a normal thing for everyone. Everybody looks at a tablet and they don't look at it at eye level. The way we look at our tablets makes us hunch over in general." Here are five easy tips from Reardon to help you fix your bad posture.

1.) Set reminders on your phone

Setting reminders for yourself on your phone to straighten out your back while you are at work can make a huge difference. By just taking a few minutes, three to four times a day, you can start to focus on breaking your bad habits once and for all. Reardon believes that it just takes a little reminder to get on the right track. "Eventually, you probably won't have to set those alarms because you will be able to feel it."

2.) Tense and release your abs

Since many of us have jobs where we are sitting at our desks all day, pressure from the rest of our body can take a toll on our lower back over time. To alleviate this pressure, Reardon believes you should take the time to tense and release your abs a few times a day. "Imagine you have a straight line like a long string going through your spine that is pulling you up," explains Reardon. "Instead of just trying to give yourself a straight back, you are trying to lift off of your hips. That's the first thing that we try to talk about in ballet — to try and lift off of your legs and create more space in your midriff."

3.) The "high release"

By lifting the top part of your shoulders backwards you will lengthen the center of your back and help open up your breathing. This is what Reardon calls a "high release" and it can do wonders for your back, especially if you are hunched in front of a screen answering emails all day.

4.) Head and neck rolls

Since the average head weighs about 11 lbs., our necks can get tense, causing us to lean forward rather than upright with good posture. By taking a few moments to roll your neck, you can relax those muscles before this leads to tension headaches. Reardon suggests taking a few minutes a few times a day to roll your neck in both directions and to also nod your head up and down as if you are affirming "yes" and "no."

5.) Shoulder rolls

Lastly, Reardon suggests rolling your shoulders throughout the day. Making sure you are doing it properly will make all of the difference. "I always tend to tell everybody not to pull their shoulders forward because if we are pushing our shoulders forward, that really promotes that slouch again."

How to get a free health screening from CVS

CVS is offering a free health screening and now is the perfect time to take advantage of this deal, since the weather is starting to change and fall is right around the corner.

The CVS Project Health Campaign is part of an effort to help patients identify health concerns and get information about their health. According to CVS, the annual Project Health campaign has delivered more than $122 million worth of free health services since the program was launched in 2006.

"Project Health is part of CVS Health's commitment to improving access to quality care by identifying health concerns and risk factors for participants who may not have otherwise sought preventative care," Dr. Troyen A. Brennan, chief medical officer of CVS Health, said in a statement.

What's included in the CVS free health screening?

According to CVS, the free biometric health screening includes several important health tests including body mass index (BMI) blood pressure, glucose and a total cholesterol check.

"Chronic conditions, which can often be life-threatening, can be treated very effectively when identified early at screenings such as Project Health, and can help to improve a patient's health and well-being," Dr. Brennan said.

After the health screenings are complete, patients will have the opportunity to speak with nurses on-site to discuss the results from the health screenings and receive referrals for additional treatment at a nearby medical facility. According to CVS, the additional medical care is little to no cost.

Do I need an appointment for the free health screening at CVS?

No appointment is required for the free health screening. Patients looking to receive a free health screening just need to show up at a participating CVS location.

The free health check at CVS is available Thursdays through Sundays until Dec. 16.

$5 CVS coupon offer

Patients who take the free health screening at CVS will also receive a $5 coupon for their participation. The coupon is only valid for CVS products.

If you're someone who doesn't go to the doctor for routine check-ups, now might be the time to take advantage of this free CVS offer and get a jumpstart on a healthier lifestyle. LENYON WHITAKER

New restaurants you have to check out this fall

The city's food scene is always buzzing, no matter what season it is. But there's something about fall in the Hub that makes dinner dates out on the town even more special. As autumn kicks into gear, here's a guide to some of the new Boston restaurants you should check out this season.

Alcove

Tom Schlesinger-Guidelli, a veteran of the hospitality scene, will bring his latest venture to the waterfront of Lovejoy Wharf in the West End later this fall. Alcove will feature an all-star team behind the scenes, including executive chef Maxime Fanton (formerly of Restaurant Martín), general manager Brendan Collins (formerly of Island Creek Oyster Bar) and executive sous chef Brian Paszko

Tom Schlesinger-Guidelli

(formerly of Cultivar). Drawing inspiration from the fishing trips of Schlesinger-Guidelli's youth to his experience with wine bars and fine dining, Alcove is shaping up to be a space perfect for all kinds of guests, whether they're looking for a pre-game feast or a fancy dinner date. Lovejoy Wharf, alcoveboston.com

Casa Caña

Enjoy a taste of Havana without leaving the Hub. Located at the Studio Allston Hotel, this recently opened Latin kitchen and rum bar will help you spice things up on those chilly fall nights. Stop by to feast on Cubano sandwiches, sip on tasty cocktails, as well as experience a festive, outdoor patio area featuring a second bar, fire pits and more. 1234 Soldiers Field Rd., casacanaboston.com

Nahita

A recent addition to the Back Bay food scene, Nahita offers an interesting blend of Latin American, Asian and Turkish cuisine, as well as hand-crafted cocktails and an extensive array of internationally-inspired wines. Menu items range from Nikkei-style fare and sashimi to chips and guacamole, beef barba-coa and more. 100 Arlington St., nahita-restaurant.com

Reflections

Assembly Row has a new hotspot courtesy of Reflections at Somerville's new Row Hotel. Helmed by chef Kenneth Lingle and open for breakfast, lunch and dinner, the restaurant has a number of menu offerings perfect for fall, including an heirloom tomato and burrata salad; pollen-dusted salmon with a sunchoke puree; plus an autumn-

Ken Watanabe was nearly a hostage in the crisis that inspired 'Bel Canto'

The Japanese actor stars in the adaptation of Ann Patchett's beloved novel.

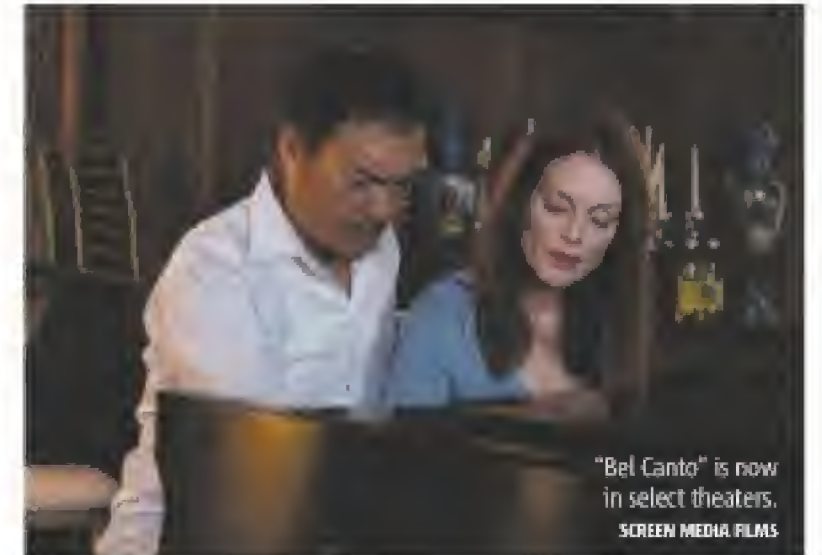

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

The popularity of Ann Patchett's 2001 award-winning novel "Bel Canto" always meant that an endless list of actors were going to be interested in starring in Paul Weitz's adaptation.

But while the likes of Sebastian Koch, Christopher Lambert and Julianne Moore were attracted to its dramatic story of a famous American soprano (Moore) becoming trapped in a hostage situation after she is invited to perform for a wealthy industrialist (Ken Watanabe) in South America, Ken Watanabe believes that he was always destined to star in the film.

That's because Watanabe recently revealed to Metro that he was actually in Peru until just a week before the '90s Japan Embassy hostage crisis that the film is based on — and a likely attendee to the party itself.

"I was in Peru shooting a documentary until a week before the Japan Embassy hostage crisis, which inspired the novel,"

"Bel Canto" is now in select theaters.
SCREEN MEDIA FILMS

Watanabe recalls. "If I was in Peru a week longer, I would have likely attended that very party. So when I received the offer, I felt like I was destined to do the film."

But while Watanabe was nearly involved in the incident, he didn't let real events influence his performance.

"I focused on empathizing with the characters within the story, feeling their pain and despair, and didn't focus on the parts of the story that were actually based on real events," says Watanabe. "But since I was traveling in Peru around that time I had a very good understanding of what the atmosphere of the country was like."

"I remember feeling like I was in a very foreign land," he adds. "I didn't think the army had control of the civilians, and I even had a very frightening experience while in Peru."

But while the hostage scenario in "Bel Canto" might make you believe that the film is a weighty and intense drama, there's plenty of levity in the film, too. For Watanabe, that only added to the richness of the script. Especially as the guerrillas and the hostages — who, despite the obvious tension between them, ultimately start to bond because of their proximity — are from different races and cultures.

"When humans are forced into a situation of high tension or mental stress, they become stripped of their outer shell," says Watanabe. "When they are exposed like that, no action that they take is all that surprising."

NFL Power Rankings: Week 3

Ranking the top teams in the NFL ahead of Week 3.

LUKE MILLER
lml@metro.us

1. Los Angeles Rams
(2-0) Def. Arizona 34-0.
Last Week: 4

We have new faces at the top, and it's hard to deny how strong the Rams have looked. In a year lacking dominating performances from the favorites around the NFL, Los Angeles has been the exception. In a dominant performance rarely seen at the NFL level, they blanked the Cardinals, holding them to 137 yards and just five first downs. They'll face a much tougher test in their crosstown rival Chargers, but something tells us they'll be up to it.

2. Jacksonville Jaguars
(2-0) Def. New England 31-20. Last Week: 7

The most impressive part of an impressive game for Jacksonville Sunday? How about holding Rob Gronkowski to two catches for 15 yards while the Patriots were in desperate come-back mode. You expect Jacksonville's defense to turn in this kind of effort. You don't always expect Blake Bortles to have the massive game he turned in, and if that's the new normal in Jacksonville, you could be looking at your 2018 AFC favorites.

3. Kansas City Chiefs (2-0) Def. Pittsburgh 42-37. Last Week: 5

The Chiefs waited a long time to start winning with a homegrown quarterback, but it was worth it. Patrick Mahomes has 10 touchdown passes through two games after torching the Steelers for six Sunday morning. He's going to need to keep it up, because the defense doesn't look like anything Kansas City can rely on soon. They have 80 points through two victories, but their opponents have 65.

4. Tampa Bay Buccaneers (2-0) Def. Philadelphia 27-21. Last Week: 16

It's a high ranking based

on a small sample size, but that sample now includes victories over last year's Super Bowl champs and one of this year's Super Bowl favorites. Tampa Bay is operating the most impressive offense in football and they aren't even bothering to run the ball to do it. Ryan Fitzpatrick has 400 yards and four touchdowns in back-to-back weeks and now has a shot at the Steelers defense that just gave up six scores through the air. Yikes.

5. Minnesota Vikings (1-0-1) Tied Green Bay 29-29. Last Week: 2
Vikings fans will hope that Minnesota's kicker issues are finally figured out after the team signed Dan Bailey this week. On a bad day around the NFL Sunday, Daniel Carlson may have had the worst, missing two field goals in overtime. Kirk Cousins showed exactly why Minnesota signed him, on the other hand, with three touchdown passes in the fourth quarter and 425 yards and a fourth score on the day.

6. Philadelphia Eagles (1-1) Lost to Tampa Bay 27-21. Last Week: 1
It was good news that Jay Ajayi reentered the game Sunday, as the Eagles are looking in need of some playmakers beyond Nelson Agholor. The offense's bumpy start shouldn't be laid at the feet of Nick Foles, but Philadelphia fans will nevertheless eagerly welcome back Carson Wentz in Week 3. Wentz was the odds-on favorite for MVP before he was injured in late 2017, and his first game back against Indianapolis should be one of the leading stories in Week 3.

7. New England Patriots (1-1) Lost to Jacksonville 31-20. Last Week: 3
Reactionary? Sure. But it's one thing for the Patriots offense to be stymied by the Jacksonville defense. It's another for their defense to allow Blake Bortles 377 yards and four touchdowns to prevent any hope of another late comeback. They'll face another difficult matchup this week against former defensive coordinator Mike Patricia, now in Detroit. Who knows more about whom? That'll be fun to watch.

8. Atlanta Falcons (1-1) Def. Carolina 31-24. Last Week: 9
In a reversal of sorts, Matt Ryan outshone Cam Newton on the ground in Atlanta, finishing with two rushing touchdowns.

He found the endzone twice through the air as well, so the red-zone problems that stuck with the Falcons in Week 1 might be wearing off. Tevin Coleman looked more than capable of handling the ground duties in Devonta Freeman's absence, with 107 yards on just six carries.

9. Green Bay Packers (1-0-1) Tied Minnesota 29-29. Last Week: 8
Mason Crosby missed in overtime, too, but from 52 yards and after five successful kicks on the day, we'll allow it. Aaron Rodgers' performance didn't quite reach the mythic heights of a week ago against Chicago, and the Packers have to be worried that they allowed Rodgers and his questionable knee to be sacked four times Sunday. Not a good way to go forward.

10. New Orleans Saints (1-1) Def. Cleveland 21-18. Last Week: 12
After combining for 88 points and 1000 yards of offense with the Buccaneers, they entered the fourth quarter Sunday against Cleveland with three points to their name. Hoping to pull off the same comeback won't be a good strategy in a big early-season game against the Falcons.

11. Carolina Panthers (1-1) Lost to Atlanta 31-24. Last Week: 10
Weapons seem to be flashing for the Panthers: First-round pick D.J. Moore had a 51-yard touchdown (albeit no other catches) and 2017 first-rounder Christian McCaffrey had 102 receiving yards. The defense, however, was unable to pressure Matt Ryan, forced just five incompletions and allowed 450 yards of offense. Are strengths reversing in Carolina?

Aries Take note of what others are doing to get a better idea of what you should do next. It's how you react that will make a difference to the outcome of a situation.

Taurus A change of heart will leave you in a precarious position. Protect yourself emotionally, financially or physically. If you choose to remain calm, you will find a way to handle uncertainty.

Gemini A timeout will do you good. Consider what you have and the changes going on around you. Take better care of your personal belongings and your important relationships.

Cancer Don't sit idle when you should be making moves and creating opportunities. Use your intelligence and charm to convince others to help you get what you want. Romance is featured.

Leo Take better care of your health, property and possessions. Simplicity and moderation will help prevent an argument with someone concerned about your generosity or indulgent habits.

Virgo Discuss your intentions and feelings. Someone's response will affect how you move forward, and a change at home will give you hope and bring you joy.

Libra Don't leave anything to chance. The more things you do for yourself, the better off you'll be. If you count on others, you will be disappointed. Listen to your head and protect your heart.

Scorpio Observe how others react. The changes going on around you may be subtle but telling. Aggression isn't the answer, but discussion and compromise will bring you closer to a workable solution.

Sagittarius Fact-checking will help you avoid being taken advantage of by an expert manipulator. Take notes and ask reliable people to verify what you have been told.

Capricorn Personal gains can be made. The changes you indulge in should be geared toward relaxing, updating your look and improving your relationship with the people you care about most.

Aquarius Emotions will mount. Don't let someone goad you into something you will end up regretting. You don't have to join in. Don't let temptation be your downfall.

Pisces Get involved in something that excites you. Offering your assistance or collaborating with someone who can help you reach your goals will pay off. Partnerships are favored. EUGENIA LAST
